coreyaxelrod

Corey is a Hard of Hearing individual who is also culturally Deaf. He is 4th generation in his family with deafness. Shaped by his experiences growing up in a Deaf family and attending a main-streamed program, Corey's consulting, training and training emphasizes the organizational benefits of being more proactive and responsive to the communication challenges Deaf and Hard of Hearing individuals face on a daily basis.

Don't Be Mad If I Don't Look: Accommodating HoH Consumers 9:00 AM – 12:00 PM

This workshop explores the multiple challenges Hard of Hearing consumers face on a daily basis in today's society and how interpreters can best adapt to provide support. These topics are not often taught or discussed in interpreting training programs (ITPs), often leaving new or inexperienced interpreters unfamiliar with the realities of interpreting for a consumer base with a wide range of needs.

Medical Interpreting Is Only Interpreting – Or Is It Not? 1:00 PM – 4:00 PM

We are all shaped by our own life experiences. All the memories, good and bad, have permanently altered our outlook towards our lives and future. Meanwhile, as interpreters frequently encounter common procedures, diseases, and conditions in emergency or clinical settings, how they react to an experience and how they choose to respond affects their job performance... and, ultimately, the patients' clinical experiences.
